

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE 20PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER
18 MARCH 1980

STAT

More talk

PETER MALATESTA —

Theatergoers' heads bobbed as CIA director Stansfield Turner and FBI director William Webster both appeared at the Washington opening of a new Canadian musical, "Billy Bishop Goes To War." "It's an undercover operation," Mrs. Bill Webster said with a wink. Actually, Webster, Turner and Canadian ambassador Peter Towe, host of the event, are old diplomatic pals. "They go to football games and Halloween parties together," one guest explained.

"We didn't attract spies, we attracted friends," Carol Towe, wife of the ambassador, chided. Included was director Mike Nichols, who has an eye on the Broadway-bound play. Puffing a thin cigar and sipping champagne, Nichols signaled laryngitis when reporters approached him. It was actually Nichols who discovered "Billy Bishop" last year in a Legion hall in Listowel, Ontario.